

Final Project Proposal

Ifeoma Abara

For the final project I will be taking it on by myself. I am continuing to explore processing, and p5 and will try out new ways of how I can implement these visuals with other HTML and CSS components in an engaging way. Not just a flat website but something more dynamic and different. I also plan on incorporating other visual and audio elements. Like most of my projects I prefer to leave things open ended and allow for the audience to explore and come to their own conclusions or assumptions. For this project I plan on making it much more personal for the rest, drawing from my past work and also including some of my more recent experiences. I am considering a one page website with a mix of video, images, text, and sound. Because we are remote, I thought that making something that is easily accessible to everyone without having to download anything or watch through a shared screen would be best. I wanted something everyone can explore on their own time and pace.
